pass arguments to a bound method? I have a class with a bound method. I would like to pass in some variable parameters to the bound method. Is this possible? My bound method looks like this: `@Orderable.class public Order createOrder(MyParamClass obj) { .... }` and my method looks like this: `public void createOrder(MyParamClass obj) { Order order = Order.createOrder(obj); }`

A: The basic idea is that you can pass arguments to a method of a class by: Defining and implementing an interface that does not provide any additional behavior (maybe just an abstract class or a base interface), Defining an abstract class that implements the interface, Passing an instance of the abstract class to a method of a class that is designed to accept the interface, Using the interface, When you define the class, the Java compiler generates a class that implements the interface for you, and the generated code does the necessary work to create the object. It's this mechanism that allows you to pass arguments to a method of an object. So what you need to do is to create a class, such as MyParamClass, that implements the interface that is used to describe the behavior of the method. Of course, you need to decide what the
